Deferred Articles.

LONDON, Jan. 18.

The following article might seem to have been borrowed from one of the romances of the last century, if the facts were not so recent and still to be witnessed:—

Ostend. Jan. 10.—For some time past we have seen in our port the most intrepid mariner perhaps that ever existed. He is an Englishman, who in a small and frail boat, about sixteen feet long, and four broad, undertakes alone the voyage from England to Ostend, where he takes on board a cargo of productions of the country, which he conveys to England in his boat. What is most astonishing is, that neither the high sea, nor the cold, nor the inclemency of the weather, stops this tardy mariner. Let us imagine a man entirely alone in the open sea, guiding a little boat, which hardly rises six inches above the surface of the ocean, exposed to the rain, to the winds, and, above all, to the intense cold which we now have, and we may judge how far the love of gain will go. In his last voyage hither he was three days in the passage, and did not stop the whole time. He has contrived an ingenious method to steer his frail vessel: placed in the front of the boat, with his back turned to the prow, he guides the helm by means of two ropes, which go the whole length of the boat, and thence manages his sails without quitting his place. As the ice might accumulate against the sides of his boat, and thus expose him to sink, he has taken care before putting out to sea, to grease the sides of his boat, that the water may not adhere to it; and in this manner he traverses the ocean, without troubling himself about the numerous dangers which he incurs, and which he has hitherto braved with impunity.'

The population of New South Wales (Botany Bay) according to the Muster at the end of 1818, was 25,054 souls.

Extraordinary Conflict.—Extract of a letter from Lieut. Collet in the Company's service, in the Presidency of Bombay, to a friend in England; it exhibits evidence of unshaken courage and intellectual readiness, scarcely to be equaled; In the beginning of May, 1815, our army, from the hot winds and bad weather, became so sickly that we were ordered into quarters. On the 6th of May, we passed through a forest, and encamped on its skirts near a small village; the headman of which entreated us to destroy a large Tiger which had killed seven of his men, was in the daily habit of stealing his cattle, and had that morning wounded his son. Another officer and myself agreed to attempt the destruction of this monster. We immediately ordered seven elephants and went in quest of the animal, which we found sleeping under a bush. The noise of the elephants awoke him, when he made a furious charge on us, and my elephant received him on her shoulder—the other six turned about and ran off, notwithstanding the exertions of their riders, and left me in the above situation. I had seen many Tigers, and had been at the killing of them, but never so large a one as this. The elephant shook him off. I then fired two balls, and the Tiger fell; but again recovering himself, he made a spring at me. I escaped him, and he seized the elephant by her hind leg; then receiving a kick from her and another ball from me, he let go his hold, and fell a second time. Thinking he was by this time disabled, I very unfortunately dismounted, intending to put an end to his existence with my pistols; when the monster, who was only crouching to take another spring, made it at that moment, and caught me in his mouth; but it pleased GOD to give me strength & presence of mind. I immediately fired into his body, and finding that had little effect, used all my force, happily disengaged my arm; and then directing my pistol to his heart, I at length succeeded in destroying him, after receiving 25 severe wounds! Lieut. Collett was so much hurt as to be obliged to retire from the service of the field.—This action did not escape the notice of the Marquis of Hastings, and the Lieut. has been appointed to a post less liable to exertion.—Carlisle Patriot.

From the German Correspondent.

At a late fair at Leipzig, an English merchant exhibited a few yards of very fine blue cloth which he offered at 7*l.* 10*s.* sterling per yard. He stated that a frock coat had been made of this cloth for the prince regent, and one for another sovereign. This excited some curiosity at Leipzig. At the Table d'Hote, the conversation of two Englishmen turned on the famous piece of royal cloth. Mr. Leinfelder, a cloth manufacturer of the firm of Kudemeyer, overheard some of their remarks, and addressed them thus:—'Gentlemen I am a cloth manufacturer at Eupen, and have brought a piece of cloth for the firm of Susmilch, in this place, at six [rix] dollars and a half per yard, and am convinced that it is better manufacture than the English cloth, though I have not yet seen the latter.' This gave rise to a wager between the Englishmen and Mr. L. Both parties appointed capable judges, who decided in favour of the cloth manufactured by Kudemeyer, declaring that the English cloth had the finest wool, but with respect to weaving, color, fulling and dressing, it could stand no comparison with the Kudemeyer cloth, in which, even after the wool was scraped off, it was still a difficult matter to detect the web or thread. This German cloth was consequently pronounced to be the handsomest and best cloth at the fair, though the English merchant demanded twenty six dollars, and 17 1-2 cents more per yard than Mr. Leinfelder.

PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.

In November last, the English ship of war Leven, while lying at Terceira, one of the western islands, was compelled by a tempest to put to sea. The waves ran tremendously high, breaking over the masts and yards, and threatening instant destruction. At this critical period a seaman was washed off deck To lower a boat was impossible, and the only hopes of saving him was by throwing out ropes to his relief. He fortunately caught a rope, and while his shipmates were hauling him in by some accident he let go. Still anxious to save him, ropes were thrown a second time, and a second time poor Jack caught hold of them. Joy now gladdened the hearts of all the crew—but alas! the poor seaman again lost his hold, was carried from the ship. There being now no prospect to save him, his companions were obliged to leave him to that fate which seemed inevitable. But the goodness of HIM who rules the turbulent ocean, soon displayed itself in a most conspicuous manner. In a few moments the unfortunate man was seen coming towards the ship, borne on the summit of a wave, which having reached the ship, broke, and threw him on board into the arms of his messmates. In a short time he was again enabled to perform his duty.—N. Y. D.

A Foot Race against time was run yesterday in this neighborhood. A man started from the corner of Zane and 3d streets, and was allowed 30 minutes to go on foot to Grey's Ferry. He performed it in twenty eight minutes and a half. The distance is about three miles and a half

PARIS, FEB. 14.

ASSASSINATION of the DUKE DE BERRI.

The inhabitants of this metropolis have been horror struck by an attrocious assassination, perpetrated last night at ten o'clock, on the person of his royal highness the Duke de Berri. The Prince attended the Dutchess to her carriage in quitting the opera-house; she was already seated, when a person passing quickly by his royal highness encircled him with his left arm, and thrust a poinard, four inches and a half long, in his right breast up to the hilt. On feeling the wound he uttered a cry, and fell senseless into the arms of his servants. The Duchess herself sprang out of the carriage and drew the dagger from the Duke's breast, whose only exclamation was 'je me meurs' The Duke was conveyed into one of the saloons of the opera, and the nearest surgeon sent for. The duchess never quitted the couch of her husband. The duke of Orleans, who was at the opera arrived immediately, accompanied by the Duchess and Mademoiselle. M. Pasquier came shortly afterwards, bringing with him in his carriage, M. Dupuytren. The surgeon bled the prince three times, and washed the wound with warm lotions. The internal hænorrhage making an alarming progress, cupping was applied, which made his royal highness suffer so much, that he exclaimed, "M. Dupuytren. Epargnez moi—Je sens ma position—Je ne crois pasque cela serve a rien:"

M. de Cazes was seated in one corner of the chamber in indescribable grief.—The assassin was interrogated in the presence of M. De Cazes, and declared boldly that he had meditated the murder ever since 1814, and that he had quitted Metz for Calais in the intention of assassinating the king on his rentree, but that he arrived too late; that he had at length resolved on the extermination of the Duke de Berri, as the youngest of the family, knowing that nature would soon dispense him from the necessity of abridging the days of the king. This monster was employed in the saddlery of the king.

M. Jacquinot de Pampelune examined him; a second dagger was found on his person.

Mademoiselle fainted twice, nor would the duchess d'Orleans leave the bed side of the Prince till the King ordered her away.

The Duke de Berri died at 6 o'clock, in the arms of his majesty.

London, Feb. 18.—We have received this morning the Paris papers of Tuesday. They are of course, painfully interesting, for they communicate a variety of facts connected with the assassination of his royal highness the duke de Berri. Among the most important of these is the undeniable one, that the atrocious crime was committed from political motives. This alarming truth was distinctly admitted, not only by the members of the two chambers, who met to address his majesty, upon the mournful occasion, but it is recognized by the king himself, in the concluding sentence of his answer to the address of the deputies. 'The chamber cannot doubt,' said his majesty, 'that feeling as a man, and acting as a king, I shall adopt every necessary measure to preserve the state from dangers, of which I am but too forcibly forewarned by the crime of this day.' The assassin himself indeed, according to the letter of our private correspondent, upon being interrogated, avowed that he had exterminated the duke, as the youngest of the royal family, 'knowing that nature would soon relieve him from the necessity of abridging the days of the king.

The Insurgents in Cadiz.

In the Paris papers of Wednesday, which arrived, a correspondent of the Gazette de France, in Bayonne, communicates a copy of a letter from Madrid, of the 14th instant, which states that the insurgent troops, who now designate themselves as the 'national troops,' have actually taken possession of Cadiz. The defection of the regiment of infantry of Sorio, and of the three squadrons of cavalry, two of which were royal carbineers decided the success of the insurgents The constitution of the Cortes was immediately proclaimed at Cadiz, and the oath to defend it was administered at the town-hall to all parties, military and civil. The commerce of the town gave a grand banquet to the civil and military authorities to celebrate the triumph of the constitution. It is added in the same letter, that the 'national army' amounts to twenty four thousand men. This intelligence received implicit credit at Bayonne, at the time of the departure of the Courier for Paris.

LISBON, January 15.

Extract of a letter, dated

CADIZ, Jan. 4.

The istant this news reached us, the councellor of state, Asmerez, who was here carrying on the proceedings relating to the officers arrested in consequence of the affair of the 8th of July (the one in which O'Donnell was implicated,) immediately embarked with his whole family, in the American vessel, which it is believed is bound to Lisbon. As we are now completely besieged on the land side, I shall be unable to inform you of the results, unless by extraordinary opportunities like the present one.

Accounts from Ireland represent a portion of that country to be in a dreadful state, from the horrid outrages which have lately been perpetrated. Murders of the most hideous description, with robberies innumerable had taken place. In Monterlony a man was murdered, his wife's arm was shattered by a ball, and the old parent of the house, of the name of Gurk, roasted alive, to compel him to make a confession where his property was concealed. The following counties swarm with murderers & robbers: Fermanaugh, Enniskillen, Donnegal, Autrim, Waterford, Roscommon, Wexford, King's county, and Galaway.

LONDON, Dec. 17.

Misunderstanding between the King and Ministers.

We alluded yesterday to the various rumors which were prevalent with respect to his majesty's ministers upon a subject of high and delicate importance. The motives which then induced us to abstain from entering into the question are now at an end, and our readers will naturally expect that we should fulfil our promise of returning to it this day.

It was well known that on Saturday last, an order in council was issued for the alteration of the church service, in which the special prayer for the princess was omitted—the order directing that all church service should in future offer up prayers solely for his majesty and the royal family. It was immediately taken for granted that this was not the only step meant to be taken with respect to the personage in question—that another and more decisive step must follow it—that the subject of divorce was instantly to be agitated—that the attention of ministers had been directed to it without delay—that a case had been submitted to the Law officers of the crown, and that they, taking into their consideration the question of law alone, thought that in point of law, such a process could not be sustained. This rumor proceeded to state that all the members of the cabinet coincided in opinion with the law officers, and that this unanimous judgment was submitted to the august personage whom it so immediately and dearly concerned.—But the rumor added, that this had by no means met the approbation of that illustrious individual, that his judgment differed so materially from the advice offered to him, as to make it impossible for his advisers to remain in office if they persevered in their decision, and if the illustrious individual should resolve not to depart from his own view of the subject In the progress of the day however, it was said that the difficulties of any agreement were found to be insuperable—that ministers had in consequence tendered their resignation, which had been accepted—and that the Marquis of Wellesley had been sent for to frame a new administration. We have thus confined ourselves to the rumors of the day.

The Evening Star, of Feb. 7, says, that "letters were last week received from Marseilles, by a house of the first respectability, stating, that a British merchant man had sailed from Marseilles for Leghorn, to convey the Queen to England."

The bill for depriving the Princess of Wales of her title of queen, in case of the death of George the 3d, not having been proposed to parliament, she is now queen of the united kingdoms. It is possible she will not be crowned.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 28.

Fire!—We are sorry to inform our readers, that, on Saturday last, between the hours of ten and eleven, a most alaming fire was discovered in a room over Messrs. Clay and Cullenworth's counting houses, in Marsden square. The engines arrived in due time, but were for a long time useless, owing to the water plugs being frozen up. In consequence, the destructive element raged with such fury that the whole of Messrs. Clay and Cullenworth's most extensive warehouses were burnt to the ground, and the flame communicated with both the adjoining stores, the large one occupied by Messrs. Hudson and Price being likewise burnt to the ground.—The fire was so intense, and such quantities of blazing calicoes were flying in the air, that the company in the Palace Inn refused to go to bed, apprehending some might fall down the chimneys. A friend in Mnchester, estimates the total loss at upwards of forty thousand pounds, but we have heard it is so high as one hundred thousand. The parties are, however principally covered by their insurances; Messrs. Clay and Cullenworth alone to the amount of twenty thousand pounds. The goods were removed from the ware houses in the vincinity to the middle of the square, and protected by a guard of soldiers; nevertheless, we are sorry to hear, that many of the smaller and more valuable species of goods were stolen, and many pockets picked during the night. It was not till Sunday morning at four o'clock, that all apprehensions had ceased for the safety of that pile of valuable warehousing, commencing with Mr. Massey's premises, and ex ending into Market street. The fire is not yet (Wednesday morning) perfectly extinct. We are gratified to learn, that there is not the least suspicion of the fire having been the work of incendiaries.

BALTIMORE, March 11.

Amidst the various articles of foreign intelligence, by the recent arrival at N York, none appear to have so direct a bearing on the future growth and prosperity of the U. States as the following:—

'Petersburgh, December 10.

Troops have been embarked lately at Consiadt, who are destined to occupy the Russian possessions in Asia, and the islands situated on the coast of Kamptschatka, this way being considered as preferable to that hitherto used, of marching troops by Siberia.

The Russians are constantly augmenting their establishments in America. where they have (in Norfolk sound) a fort mounted with one hundred pieces of cannon. Since 1813 they have extended themselves to more than five hundred leagues beyond the river Columbia, along the coast, and have estabished themselves at Bodega, situate only thirty leagues from the most distant colonies of the Spaniards in California. Bodega is a good soil, and possesses all the advantages desirable for commerce. The routes from Petersburgh have been considerably improved. A great number o ships freighted with skins, set out every year, from the north west coast of America, double the Cape of Good Hope, and bring their rich cargoes to the Gulf of Finland. The Russian colonists established in America are very well protected there by the Civil and Military Administrations. Among the officers of the marine are the sons of the first families, who receive an excellent education, considering the distant situation of those countries. It is not the same in the North American and English provinces, where commerce is the only object Nothing is considered but the advantage of the moment, and man becomes a soldier by necessity. Among the Russians, on the contrary, every thing announces a great civlization: profound views seem to direct their plans and favour their enterprises.

The Russian colonies are increasing in an extraordinary manner, as well in the eastern parts of Asia as in the west of America, and every where the Russians introduce liberal institutions. It is evident that they have in view to seize upon all the commerce of the northwestern coast of America, and to induce the natives, who live by hunting and fishing, to furnish them with skins for the Chinese markets. It cannot be doubted that upon this point the Russians have already done much injury to the Americans, particularly in whatever concerns their trade with China, and their traffic with this empire must increase more & more. By the extension of their establishments on the northwest coast of America, they carry on by Asia regular communications between America and Europe.'

This intelligence is extracted from the Moniteur, and the dangers to be apprehended from the immense and still growing power of Russia, may appear more terrific when viewed through that medium. France has suffered so severely from the Russians, that she looks with a jealous eye on every advance of its power. But there is something in the silent, stealing, unostentatious, progressive advances of greatness among nations—that cautious and systematic growth of an empire, already of immense and formidable magnitude; in the vast military preparations making from one extent of such an empire to the other. Armies raised, enlarged, and disciplined, when there is no foe ostensibly to contend with; there is something in the nature of these silent conquests, as well calculated to excite alarm, as if they were made amidst the thunders of battle.

It may be questioned now, if Alexander himself, could tell the exact boundary of his own dominions. He knows only that they are every day expanding, and as they do expand, he encreases his land armaments. When such vast and formidable accessions of territory are gained without bloodshed, he has no motive whatever of putting his strength to the test. But in the mean time we know that his armies are commanded by the first generals of the age; that he invites from all nations men of the first intelligence in tactics, skilful engineers, profound statesmen, men of science to design, and the most skilful artists to execute; all these characters to reside at his court, and with these ominous appearances his territories are hourly enlarging. It seems something like romance for an American reader to be informed, that his own continent has already become the theatre of Russian Aggrandisement, yet such is the undeniable fact. Whether our administration have taken the alarm, or made any movement on this subject, whether our minister at the court of St. Petersburg has been instructed to remonstrate on this subject, we know not. It may perhaps be thought premature in a government so young as ours to agitate a subject of such delicacy now. They may think it more prudent to wait until a new order of things arises in Europe, or until some more auspicious crises arrives, than at the preseut hour, to provoke the jealousy of the monarch of Russia. Our redundant population extending hourly with such unexampled rapidity, may present safer barriers to the extension of the Russian empire on this continent than a diplomatic note. Besides, it is a point that still remains to be proved, that an empire always gains in solid permanent strength by an accession of territory.

There is a curious coincidence between Russia and France; the destinies of imperial France reposed on one man; he is now chained to a rock, and Europe enjoys the slumbers of peace. The sceptre of power is now transferred to the north, and the disposition of the successor to the Russian throne, remains yet to be tested. The death of Alexander would in all brobability throw Europe into the same convulsions, as the rerurn of Bonaparte from St. Helena. Bonaparte when he poured his legions into Moscow, transfered the sceptre of his power into the hand of Alexander.

CORK, Jan. 24.

We have had a complete change in the state of the weather since our notice on Friday. Early on Saturday a thaw commenced, accompanied by a slight rain, which increased last night to a heavy fall, and continued so until an early hour this morning. The consequences of this sudden transition, have been in some instances, we regret to say, extremely calamitous. The quick dissolution of the masses of ice and accumulations of snow on the mountains at the sources of the Lee and its tributary streams, caused a rapid increase of the waters in the river, which continued to enlarge and exceed its usual bounds up to eleven o'clock this day, at which hour a great part of the city was inundated; Hammond's marsh, Clark's marsh, Hanover street, Nile street, Cross street, and all the lanes by which they are intersected presented an uninterrupted sheet of water, on which were rapidly hurried along fragments of furniture, tables. chairs, &c. whe houses had at least four or five feet water on the ground floor. The state of the poor, resident in the wretched houses which are pricipally under the water, is most melancholy. We trust, however, that in the course of the day the waters will have subsided, as we perceive a visible decrease since the morning Boats are plying in most of the streets above mentioned.

GREAT INUNDATIONS IN HOLLAND.

Extracts of letters from Guelderland, Holland, from January 27 to 29.

"The scene of distress offered to our view is inexpressible, and draws sympathising tears from even the most unfeeling heart. From the walls and steeples of our cities and churches, there is nothing visible but a sea partly covered with fields of ice, one of which, at this moment, of severai hundred acres, threatens the destruction of a whole village. All the villages inside of the Dikes, in the lower Betuwe, are now under water. At the moment of the breaking through of the Dikes, between the Maese and Whaal, the water rushed in like a sea; in a moment the inhabitants were obliged to retire to the upper part of their houses; but soon the water reached that refuge, and they were forced to fly on the roofs; but alas! this was no safety, for many were washed away from thence to rise no more; castles, churches and houses were and are swept away by the united force of the ice and water. The inhabitants of the few houses which resist the force of the element, are exposed to all the horrors of hunger and cold in this trying season. Every effort is made to save these unfortunate beings, but human efforts are in vain. Where the want & danger is so general, the means comparatively are few, as every thing is spoiled by the water. Our towns even are in some parts under water, and often it is impossible to bake bread. The finest fields and meadows are covered in some parts with hills of sand. A great number of cattle are drowned; and for those that are saved no food is to be found. Several persons, especially children have found a watery grave; a number of houses are seen floating among the fields of ice, and in every quarter inevitable destruction seems to threaten us. This part of the Guelderland (the lower Betuwe) otherwise so beautiful a part of our country, is one universal ruin.

"From Paenenden, above Nymeguen, near the Prussian territory, to the village of Crimpin, (within six miles S. E. of Rotterdam) the whole country bordering on and between the principal rivers of the Rhyn, Yssel, Maese, Whaal, and Lek, is inundated. Night and day the roaring of cannon, the alarm-bells, and signals of distress succeed each other; and new ruptures of the dikes are at this moment announced.

"It is impossible to form an idea of our sufferings, without being an eye witness to them. The crops on the ground are all spoiled, and all the hopes of the farmers are vanished. The distress of those that are saved is so great, and the calamity so general, that unless those who are spared by Providence from this dreadful scourge afford us aid, many must perish for want. Subscriptions have been opened: the king made a grant of his private purse of 1000*l.* to provide for the first wants, and has himself repaired to the spots where further dangers threaten.

"P. S. No fears are entertained for Rotterdam, and the reports circulated respecting that city in some papers, are unfounded."

LONDON, Feb. 5.

A STEAM COACH.

An advertisement in a Dublin paper of Monday last, announces that on the first day of march, a new invented coach, impelled by steam and air pressure, is to leave the Moira Hotel Sackville street, at 20 minutes past 7 o'clock in the morning, and deliver passengers and luggage in Belfast at two o'clock; to remain 40 minutes at Belfast, and reach Dublin again at 9 o'clock. Its motion is equal to 13 miles an hour. The coaches are mounted on Mr. Bellingham's patent axles. It is added that the proprietor having an exclusive patent, will neither take mails nor use horses; therefore no delay from post offices or toll-gates can occur. Se joined to the advertisement is a certi cate dated Glasgow, Jan. 1, and signe by two engineers and one millwright, st ting that they had tried Mr. Bellingham new invented steam pressure on the mo hilly road with 20 miles of that town- that it propelled a coach loaded for th purpose, weighing in all four tons, at th rate of twenty English miles in one hour without any inconvenience, except th airing of the nave of the wheel. On man steered it with ease, and they con sider it the safest and best mode of impel ling a carriage ever invented, and not s liable to accident as a carriage drawn b horses.

London Advertisement.—"New Spe cies of Man.—Among the wonders o nature, none have exceeded this extraor dinary prenomenon—A man, literall covered with scales, that rattle at th touch, is now exhibited at the public rooms, 23 Bond street.—Physicians and Natural Philosophers will find an extensive field open for their enquiries, and every arrangement is made with regard to dress to prevent the least violation of de cency."

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 30, 1820.

STATE POLITICKS.

We have lately been considerably amused as well as edified by an occasional morceau in the 'Aurora' headed 'State Politics.' When these articles keep clear of any personal allusions, and only speak of virtue, patriotism &c. in the abstract they are exceedingly fine, but some how or other these compositions, by we know not what kind of association, remind us invariably of the sentimentality of Sheridan's Joseph Surface, or the amiable professions of Fielding's Blifiel; we think that the able Editor and his friends have some point to be gained by them, other than that of their country's good. The olive branch is held out to the "old tories and apostate whigs" and they are conjured in the name of every thing that is patriotic to drop the ancient odious party names of democrat and federalist, and unite under that of friends of reform.—This is all very clever, but we cannot help believing these editors, for editors are generally sad dogs at best, have something else in view besides mere patriotic coalition. Federalism is the same now that it was twelve years ago; but we remember that in those days if a federal candidate dared to raise his presumptuous head above the level of private life, the 'Aurora' was immediately down upon him and frightened him back into obscurity, by calling upon the orthodox with 'To your tents, oh Israel!' Is it possible that a few short years can have worked so great a change in the opinions of men who were far from being at that time children either in years or judgment. Credat Judaeus! 'something more is meant than meets the eye.'

"Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes."

If we before had any doubts, the Carlisle Convention has removed them; that assemblage of politicians, in our opinion has proved that they are perfectly willing to suffer an amalgamation, provided, nevertheless, they are permitted to select just whom they please. We have nothing to say against General Heister; we believe him to be a venerable and good citizen of undoubted integrity; but we know that there were other names mentioned at the meeting of equal integrity and of much more capacity; if party is to be done away, why had not some of these gentlemen a few votes, at all events enough to keep up appearances? Is it possible that such a man as Benj. R. Morgan could not find one voice in a congregation of electors professedly met for the purpose inter alia of conciliation? and yet Mr. Franklin was mentioned! This conduct speaks volumes and cannot be misunderstood; a glorious opportunity was offered of proving their professions, and of immolating party feeling at the altar of reconciliation, and it was rejected. We do not however wish to be understood as derogating from the character of the candidate selected.—We are unacquainted with Mr. Heister and therefore we can give no opinion of his fitness or unfitness for the important station of chief magistrate of Pennsylvania. We only allude to what we believe to be the manoeuvring of some of our eastern brother editors, who are much more at the bottom of things than people are generally aware of.

The Pittsburgh Gazette has incurred the vengeance of several consistent and patriotic editors, and the acting editor has been most decorously denominated an 'apostate.' All this is because we have refused to join Mr. Binns in the hue and cry against Mr. Findlay; sorry should we feel if ever we had done it, and we pity those federal editors who have forgotten both their policy and dignity in so doing. If being satisfied with the general features of the U. States government, makes us apostates, we are so; but we in our defence shall contend that those features are those which our friends contended for twenty years ago; if by not abusing the governor of Pennsylvania makes us apostates, we are so, but in our exculpation we shall say we never have abused this gentleman. The fact is, there can be no reasonable political difference as regards mere state government and legislation; the sphere is too limited for this science, and a question scarcely can ever occur where it can be involved, except when a legislature undertakes to give instruction to congress. The great points are those which treat of legislation for private security and internal improvement. For these purposes all we want is men of talents and men of enterprize.—In these days when party spirit is nearly neutralized, it matters very little what shade of political creed distinguishes a man who is a candidate for the state legislature, provided he is capable of aiding in those great objects. It is with these views and impressions the Pittsburgh Gazette is conducted; the great object with it has been to call the attention of our eastern brethren to the necessity of internal improvement, and to point out the danger that threatened from abroad.—How far we have succeeded we know not; we are only answerable for our intentions. We shall join no hue and cry against Mr. Findlay or any other man; neither shall we precipitately pledge ourselves to any candidate. We have been accused of being bribed by the governor's professions in favor of western improvement; if this be true, it cannot be imputed to us as moral turpitude; Regulus himself might have accepted such a bribe with perfect safety to his conscience.—The surest way to our hearts is by speaking favorably of the west, and Mr. Binns himself would have stood a much better chance to have gulled us by this means than by either talking about patriotism or railing against corruption.

From the National Intelligencer, March 23.

An occurrence took place yesterday, which has produced a strong sensation in our city; which will we are confident, produce no less in the nation, and which it would be mere affectation to refrain from noticing. A duel was fought yesterday morning, with pistols, in Maryland, just beyond the District Line, between Comm. Decatur and Comm. Barron, of the Navy of the U States. On the first fire both were wounded, the former dangerously, the latter badly. It grieves us more than we can express to say, that Com. Decatur's case is so critical, that his life is almost despaired of.

Com. Decatur lies at his own residence, and Com. Barron at Beale's tavern in this city.

Eleven o' clock, Wednesday Night, March 22.

A HERO HAS FALLEN!

Commodore STEPHEN DECATUR, one of the first Officers of our Navy—the pride of his country—the gallant and noble-hearted gentleman—IS NO MORE!

He expired a few minutes ago, of the mortal wound received in the Duel yesterday.

Of the origin of the feud, which led to this disastrous result, we know but what rumor tells,—The event we are sure, will fill the country with grief.

Mourn, Columbia! for one of thy brightest Stars is set—a Son "without fear and without reproach"—in the freshness of his fame—in the prime of his usefulness—has descended into the tomb.

We learn with great pleasure, that Capt. Macdonough has been appointed to command the line of battle ship now building at New York, when she shall be in a state to receive her commander.—Captain Macdonough having become sensible that the course pursued by the Court Martial, of which he was a member, and which led to the officers composing said court being ordered home, was incorrect, with that magnanimity which bespeaks a great mind, acknowledged his error to the chief of the Navy Department, who has taken the earliest opportunity of restoring this gallant officer to the service.—This appointment will of course afford additional pleasure, when it is recollected that it is made without impairing that subordination which is so essential to our naval service.

The Bankrupt Bill is now on the tapis in both Houses of Congress, and begins to attract attention. In another part of our paper will be found a short article on the subject, from the pen of a practical man

Subjoined is an extract of a letter from an intelligent English merchant, now in this country, who had been written to for information respecting the public opinion in Great Britain, where the experiment has been fully tried, of the merits of the system. We understand that Mr. Lowndes, whose opinion is referred to, had spoken of the British system as it is, with all the acknowledged defects, which serve to make it unpopular, and not of the abstract question of the expediency of any system of bankrupt laws.

March 2, 1820.

"I think Mr. Lowndes must be mistaken in regard to the Bankrupt Laws. I do not think the general opinion in England is opposed to them as a system. It certainly is in their present form; for they are, I have always understood, very defective. But I know that much pains has been taken to get them revised anew, and John Smith the Banker (Smith, Payne and Smith) has been actually engaged in this. About a year ago, he told me he had been turning his attention to the subject for two years, and had then nearly digested a new system entirely, which he meant to submit to parliament. It was I think, brought forward by him last session, but not acted upon. No doubt many abuses have crept in, and flaws been discovered in the present system; but I do not well see how a commercial country like Britain can get on without a Bankrupt Law."

Important Tour.—We are informed that the Secretary of War has instructed Governor Cass to proceed upon an exploring tour to the north western extremity of Lake Superior, and thence to the heads of the Mississippi, and by the way of Prairie du Chien and Green Bay to Lake Michigan.

No part of the United States is less known than the country upon this route. We depend for our information respecting it almost wholly upon the reports of the Indian traders. It is certainly time that the important geographical questions connected with it were satisfactorily solved. It has long been known that large masses of virgin copper are to be found on one of the streams which empty into Lake Superior on its southern shore. Those require to be fully examined, and the country should be purchased from the Indians for the benefit of the United States. Its mineralogocal treasures could then be used for important national objects.

BROWNSVILLE, (Pa.) March 13.

Accident.—On Thursday last, the the chain bridge over Dunlap's creek, between Brownsville & Bridgeport, broke down with a waggon and six horses upon it. The waggon fell on the bank, this side of the stream, the horses in the water. The driver who was on the saddle horse, was pitched between the two middle horses, where he was held entangled in the gears, until relieved by the citizens. He received no material injury, but two of the horses were killed. The team we understand was the property of a person named Hackney, near Winchester, Virginia.

The distance from the floor of this bridge to the surface of the water, must have been at least 30 feet.

We are obligingly permitted to present it to our readers, to whom generally, its condensed form will make it much more intelligible that the report itself would have been.

FOR THE GAZETTE

Oh say not the breast is unfruitful and cold,
Which the blasts of misfortune too rudely have swept;
Nor think there is nothing for time to unfold,
Which the kind hand of nature in secret has kept.
No—the buds of the heart prematurely may shoot,
And the sharp frosts of penury, sorrow and pain,
May scatter the blossoms and wither the fruit,
While the tree left uninjured, may flourish again!

The breast like the soil by the cold winter bound,
Will sometimes be desolate churlish and bare,
No sun-beams illume it, no verdure is found,
To shew there is warmth or fertility there;
But the germs will dilate when the spring time returns,
And sun-beams and dews are dispensed from above;
So the heart re-illumin'd with new rapture burns,
And produces affection and friendship and love.

A Supplement,

TO an Ordinance entitled "An Ordinance providing for the pavement of the cartways & footways of the streets, and prescribing the duties of the street commissioners.

SECTION 1.—Be it ordained and enacted by the citizens of Pittsburgh, in Select and Common councils assembled, that when the requisite number of owners of the ground or lots, upon any square or alley, not less than a square, shall petition the councils for paving, and the same being approved, it shall be the duty of the street commissioner to advertise the same for at least two weeks, by putting up printed or written advertisements in the most public places of the city, and to contract with the lowest and best bidder; but all such contracts shall before completed, shall be submitted to and approved by the mayor; and when entered into, shall be filed in the mayor's office. And the owners shall be bound to the pavers for the payment thereof, and shall receive a credit with the city for the amount, as provided for in the second section of the ordinance to which this is a supplement.

SECTION 2.—And be it further ordained and enacted by the authotity aforesaid, that whenever any street or square of ground shall have been authorised by the councils to be paved, the owners of lot or lots opposite such street or square, shall set or cause to be set, good and sufficient curb-stones, at their own proper charge and expense; and if after twenty days notice being given by the street commissioner, the said owners shall refuse or neglect to have the said curb-stones set, then and in such case, the same shall be done by the street commissioner, and the amount of setting curb-stones, and twenty per centum as a penalty, shall be charged to the owner or owners thereof, which shall be recovered and collected in the same manner as city taxes are usually recovered and collected.

SECTION 3.—And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, that it shall be the duty of the street commissioner to advertise, in manner aforesaid, for the clearing and preparing all streets or squares ordered to be paved, and to contract with the lowest and best bidder for clearing and preparing the same; and to take sufficient security from the contractors for the execution of such contract; and all contracts, and the sureties for performing the same, shall be approved by the mayor and filed in his office, as herein before directed.

OF THE

Sacred Scriptures,

IN VERSE.

This most interesting work has cost the author about three years labour, during which period he applied himself with uncommon assiduity to the various and intricate subjects which it embraces.

The narrative has been happily preserved, whilst the writer adhered closely throughout to its divine origin, whereby a perfect knowledge of the sacred text is united with a never failing source of innocent and substantial amusement, which will be found by every age and class of christians, equal if not superior to any work of the kind heretofore offered to the public.

It will be printed on good paper with a fair type; to contain about 400 8vo pages, and will be put to press as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers may be obtained to justify the publication.

Price to the subscribers will be three dollars per copy in sheets, or three dollars and fifty cents full bound.

W. & R. LECKY'S

SUPERIOR EXTRA PATENT

PLOUGHS

Warranted equal to any ever made in the United States.

In pointing out the advantages of the Ploughs over those generally termed 'Peacock's Patent Ploughs,' the subscribers assure the public that they are not actuated by any motives of jealousy or hostility to the persons who have, as they themselves state, purchased the rights for a 'valuable consideration.' But when on a fair trial, the superiority of their Ploughs has been so generally acknowledged by practical farmers, and from the very rapid sale they have met with, they are induced to prefer their claim to precedence.

Because—Their ploughs have a whole share and landside with a socket, made of wrought iron and steel, which prevents the necessity of a number of screws and bolts, which impede the operation of the ploughs by catching roots, grass, &c.

Because—They are so constructed, that any of the irons may be separately taken to a smith's shop for repair, without the necessity, as in case of 'Peacock's Patents,' of taking the whole plough to the shop.

Because—They are more simple in their construction, and less liable to be out of repair.

The ploughs will all be branded with the names of the subscribers, and warranted, and a general assortment of the various sizes always on hand. Also on hand, a quantity of IRONS and CASTINGS, which will be sold on moderate terms, and instructions given (gratis) to such persons as may wish to make the wood work of their own ploughs.

As the proprietors of 'Peacock's Patents,' wish to deter the public from purchasing what they call 'half patents,' in allusion as we believe to those made by the subscribers, under the penalties of the law for every infringement, we deem it proper to state, that those who are disposed to purchase from us will be indemnified, in any security they demand, from the threats thus improperly held out.

Their ploughs are always made of the best materials, and of well seasoned wood.

They still carry on the COACH & WAGGON making business, at their old stand in Wood st. corner of Virgin alley.

Beauty, Utility and Durability!

THE public are respectfully informed that the subscriber has finally concluded to remain in this city some length of time, in order to afford an ample opportunity to residents of having their houses or parts thereof, plainly painted or ornamented as may best suit their taste. The work is executed with despatch, either in oil or water colours, in exact imitation of paper hangings or according to any given design.

The superiority of this mode of decorating apartments in preference to paper hangings lies chiefly in its permanency, as it will bear cleansing by washing, and the choice of colours, patterns, landscapes, etc. etc. suitable to the size and situation of the apartment.

The expense is not more than that of papering and renewable in any manner most suitable.

Beauty, Utility and Durability!

THE public are respectfully informed that the subscriber has finally concluded to remain in this city some length of time, in order to afford an ample opportunity to residents of having their houses or parts thereof, plainly painted or ornamented as may best suit their taste. The work is executed with despatch, either in oil or water colours, in exact imitation of paper hangings or according to any given design.

The superiority of this mode of decorating apartments in preference to paper hangings lies chiefly in its permanency, as it will bear cleansing by washing, and the choice of colours, patterns, landscapes, etc. etc. suitable to the size and situation of the apartment.

The expense is not more than that of papering and renewable in any manner most suitable.

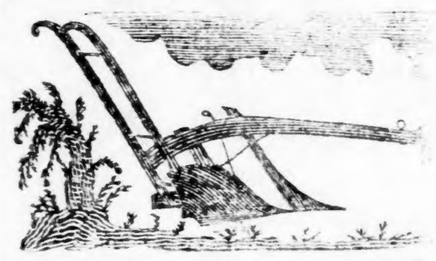
W. & R. LECKY'S



SUPERIOR EXTRA PATENT

PLOUGHS

Warranted equal to any ever made in the United States.

In pointing out the advantages of the Ploughs over those generally termed 'Peacock's Patent Ploughs,' the subscribers assure the public that they are not actuated by any motives of jealousy or hostility to the persons who have, as they themselves state, purchased the rights for a 'valuable consideration.' But when on a fair trial, the superiority of their Ploughs has been so generally acknowledged by practical farmers, and from the very rapid sale they have met with, they are induced to prefer their claim to precedence.

Because—Their ploughs have a whole share and landside with a socket, made of wrought iron and steel, which prevents the necessity of a number of screws and bolts, which impede the operation of the ploughs by catching roots, grass, &c.

Because—They are so constructed, that any of the irons may be separately taken to a smith's shop for repair, without the necessity, as in case of 'Peacock's Patents,' of taking the whole plough to the shop.

Because—They are more simple in their construction, and less liable to be out of repair.

The ploughs will all be branded with the names of the subscribers, and warranted, and a general assortment of the various sizes always on hand. Also on hand, a quantity of IRONS and CASTINGS, which will be sold on moderate terms, and instructions given (gratis) to such persons as may wish to make the wood work of their own ploughs.

As the proprietors of 'Peacock's Patents,' wish to deter the public from purchasing what they call 'half patents,' in allusion as we believe to those made by the subscribers, under the penalties of the law for every infringement, we deem it proper to state, that those who are disposed to purchase from us will be indemnified, in any security they demand, from the threats thus improperly held out.

Their ploughs are always made of the best materials, and of well seasoned wood.

They still carry on the COACH & WAGGON making business, at their old stand in Wood st. corner of Virgin alley.

THE partnership heretofore existing under the firm of S. & J. They further note that if this reqnest is not complied with in a reasonable time, that all the accounts without distinction of persons, shall be put in the hands of a proper person for collection.

S. & J. Thompson, will in future carry on their former business under their separate names, and respectfully inform their friends and the public that any commands in their line of business will be promptly attended to.

The above business will in future be carried on by the subscriber, at the old stand in Pittsburgh, and as he intends to devote his whole time and attention to the business, the public may rest assured that all orders will be promptly attended to.

The utility, convenience and economy of "C. Pooly's Patent Cooking Stove or Portable Kitchen," are becoming too well known in the western country not to be rightly appreciated in these times of pecuniary pressure, when economy in families is so highly recommended and so much insisted on by all wise and judicious men in the country. As this Stove has already obtained the entire approbation of many respectable citizens of Pittsburgh and various parts of the western country who have made trial of it, the subscriber refers to such for any information that may be desired respecting this great improvement in domestic economy.
